Dimitrios Nikolopoulos is a professor in High Performance and Distributed Computing and the Head of the School of Electronics, Electrical Engineering and Computer Science, at Queen's University of Belfast (Northern Ireland). Nikolopoulos received his BEng (1996), MSc (1997) and PhD (2000) degrees in Computer Engineering and Informatics from the University of Patras (Greece). His research expertise is in system software, with particular emphasis on performance, power and reliability aspects of servers and distributed systems. He has served as program committee member and associate editor of several leading conferences and journals in the high performance computing and computer architecture domain.

CV: http://www.eeecs.qub.ac.uk/ D.Nikolopoulos/resources/cv.pdf